University's progress against SDG3: Good Health and Well-being

The University contributes to health both by delivering care and by teaching it. Its affiliated Homoeopathic and Ayurvedic Medical College and Hospital units provide healthcare to the community, the School of Pharmacy contributes research on medicines and public health and runs community health-awareness camps, and the campus Health Centre supports the health of students and staff.

Counselling, and the maternity and paternity provisions described in the SDG 5 metrics, belong to the same student and staff welfare arrangement.

The detailed metrics for SDG 3 are in this submission. The affiliated hospital patient-care and outreach records, the School of Pharmacy research and community-camp reports and the Health Centre service records are attached.
