

Report on National Hunger

University as a body provide events for local farmers and food producers to connect and transfer knowledge

Year 2024-25

SDG-2	ZERO HUNGER
University as a body provide events for local farmers and food producers to connect and transfer knowledge

The School of Agriculture brings farmers and food producers together with faculty, students and scientists through events held for them. These include farmer awareness and training programmes, extension programmes, demonstrations of farming techniques, and sessions on soil and crop management, sustainable farming and new technology. At these events farmers describe their own problems and practices, students see farm conditions first-hand, and faculty give technical guidance.

The University's agriculture programme names this student, farmer and scientist interface as one of its objectives. Each event is documented so that the programme, the participants and the knowledge shared can be traced.

The report of the Agriculture Department's activities for skilling farmers, creating technology awareness and supporting food producers is attached.

DOCUMENTS REQUIRED

- ✓ Agriculture Department activities for skilling of farmers, technology awareness among farmers and activities for food producers

