University as a body have a policy of non-discrimination for transgender people

Year 2024-25

SDG-5

GENDER EQUALITY

University as a body have a policy of non-discrimination for transgender people

The University's non-discrimination policy extends to gender identity and follows the Transgender Persons (Protection of Rights) Act, 2019 and the Supreme Court's NALSA judgment. It covers admissions, academic participation, employment and the use of university facilities. Where the law and administrative procedure permit, a person's self-identified gender is recognized in university records.

A grievance about discrimination on grounds of gender identity goes through the same Internal Complaints Committee and equal-opportunity mechanism that handles other discrimination complaints, and any student, faculty member or staff member can use it.

The subject is covered in induction and sensitization sessions along with the non-discrimination content for women. The policy document is attached.
